

fmac round 2

You must write a script based on the prompt below.

First Teenager (Privileged, Troubled)

- Well-dressed in designer clothes
- Sitting in a plush armchair, visibly tense
- Bruised from a recent fight (split lip, swollen cheek)
- Irritable, rebellious, and emotionally isolated despite immense privilege
- Nursed wounds as a symbol of repeated defiance
- Believes he can rely on his mother's approval, though misguided

Second Teenager (Rival)

- Also from a wealthy family, but ostentatious in appearance
- Smug and provocative attitude
- Nursed wounds from the same fight (black eye, bloodied knuckle)
- Aggressive posture, arms crossed, staring coldly at the first boy
- Deep personal rivalry worsened by family conflict
- His father is trying to buy out the first boy's father's company (corporate rivalry background)

School Counselor (Recently Divorced Woman)

- Late thirties, weary yet empathetic expression
- Holds a file but focuses more on the tension than paperwork
- Recently divorced, carrying quiet sadness
- Took a job hoping to help troubled youths
- Frustrated by a system that protects the privileged
- Feels powerless, guilt over inability to reach either boy

Mother of First Teenager (Corporate Lawyer)

- High-powered, cold, prioritizes family reputation and success
- Dismissive of the son's needs and emotions
- Sees the boy as a failure, focused solely on appearances and achievement

Father of First Teenager (CEO with Humble Background)

- Quietly considerate but always busy
- Runs a multinational company built from humble origins
- Guilt-ridden, thinks about his son often, but never shows it
- Emotionally distant due to work and societal expectations
- Son misinterprets this as an absence of care

Key Situation

- Both boys sit nursing their wounds after a recent physical fight
- The second boy smirks at the first, clearly enjoying his discomfort
- The school counselor stands nearby, trying to mediate but feeling helpless

- The faint hum of a luxury car grows louder as the parents approach
- The mother and father of the first boy enter, accompanied by the counselor
- No dialogue is spoken yet; the mood is heavy with unspoken resentment and expectation
- The confrontation is about to unfold as all characters converge

Incorporate as many points as possible in your script. Try to avoid simply stating the above points in just one or two lines; try to build on them in your story. Use effective dialogue and not just purely visual cues. Limit your script to 5 pages with proper formatting. Please avoid using Google Docs and use a proper formatting app like Beat, KitScenarist, etc (or final draft if you're rich). Try to export the script as a PDF file in A4 size.

We want a proper formatting app to be used because the limit is in terms of pages and not words, so the constraints should be common to everyone.

You will be evaluated based on the following:

- The number of plot points you can incorporate in your script
- The quality of the story and dialogue you create

Refer to the resources below for any doubts:

Specific Resources We'd like you to check out for this task, in the order of priority -

- <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-AhtKvgy6MA> - This will help you use exposition in dialogue without it feeling unnatural.
- Tyler Mowery's vids on exposition
- Understanding Exposition
- How to Write Exposition for Your Screenplay
 - Exposition analysis (does not necessarily teach how to do it well, but these are good analysis videos, according to me)
- In Praise of Great Exposition
- In praise of layered exposition

We suggest you first get a rough document/paper and write an outline of what info to be conveyed in each scene, then start writing the actual script. It would be easier and faster.
